The Advance

Warm November Weather

Alberta has been experiencing a sort of second Indian Summer during the past two weeks, with very high temperatures at many points. The snow which came in the latter part of October has almost entirely disappeared in many places, and reports come from Southern Alberta that the cattle are once more on grass, and maximum temperatures there reached as high as 60 degrees early in last week. However such warm weather is not entirely unusual for Alberta, for the records of the past ten years show some very high November temperatures during that period, as well as some quite low ones of course. At Edmonton, in four of the ten years, the November maximum temperature was over 60 degrees, with a high record of 74 degrees in 1931. The average mean temperature for November in the ten years at Edmonton was 24 degrees. At Calgary, the ten year record shows seven years in which the thermometer passed the 60 degree mark during November, with an average mean temperature for November during the ten years of 28 degrees. Lethbridge also had seven years in the past ten in which the mercury rose above 60 degrees in November, and its average mean temperature for November for the ten year period was 31.

"AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?"

Over the hill trailed a man behind a mule drawing a plow. Said the man to the mule:

"Bill, you are the mule, the son of a jackass, and I am a man made in the image of God. Yet, here we work, hitched up together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me or I work for you. Verily, I think it a partnership between a mule and a fool, for surely I work as hard as you, if not harder. Plowing or cultivating we cover the same distance, but you do it on four legs and I on two. I therefore do twice as much work per leg as you do.

"Soon we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give one third to the landlord for being so kind as to let us use this small wreck of God's universe. One third goes to you and the balance is mine. You consume all of your portion with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine between seven children, six hens, two ducks and a banker. If we both need shoes you get 'em. Bill, you are getting the best of me and I ask you it is fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to swindle a man, a creation of the lord, out of his substance?

"Why you only help to plow and cultivate the ground, and I alone must cut, shock and husk the corn while you look over the pasture fence and hee-haw at me.

"All fall and most of the winter the whole family, from Granny to the baby, picks cotton to help raise money to pay taxes and buy a new harness and pay the interest on the mortgage on you. And what do you care about the mortgage? Not a damn! You ornery cuss, I even have to worry about the mortgage on your tough, ungrateful hide.

"About the only time I am your better is on election day, for I can vote and you can't. And

Young Peoples' Bridge Club

The first meeting of the younger sets bridge club was held last night, Wednesday, in the dining room of the Chinook hotel.

Cards were played at four tables, with high scores being recorded by Miss Broston and W. Gallaugher.

The officers elected were: Pres. W. Gallaugher. Sec. Miss M. Otto.

The first part of the evening was spent in the election of officers and discussing plans for the future. After this cards were played until 11 p. m., when a delicious lunch was served, in the hotel dining room by the joint hosts and hostesses, Miss Parker, Miss J. Bayley, and Messrs. T. Nordin and H. Johnston.

The club will meet each Wednesday evening in the dining room of the hotel, at 8:15.

A vote of thanks and appreciation was extended to Mr. Cook for the kind use of his dining room on Wednesday evenings as a regular meeting place.

School inspector Scott, of Oyen, was a welcomed visitor to this Young Peoples Bridge Club meeting.

Cards, Dance Success

The Card Party and dance held at Laughlin Friday evening, Nov. 17th, proved to be a very successful event, having been well attended. The first ladies' prize was won by Mrs. A. A. Cameron and given by George Aitken Jr., consolation by Miss Bertha Gingles and John Wiens.

Card Club Notes

The card club met at the home of Mrs. W. S. Lee, last Tuesday evening, Nov. 21. The honors for the evening were shared by Mrs. L. Robinson and Miss Faye Robinson. The club will meet with Mrs. P. Peterson next week.

Green Feed

Four cars of green feed and hay have been received at the Railway Station the last few days for relief purposes. This has had to be taken from the cars and stored as farmers can not haul it out on the muddy roads.

A Tuxis group, for boys of teenage, has been started here by Rev. J. D. Woodlatt. Meetings will be held each Wednesday evening in the station waiting room.

after the election I begin to realize that I was fully as great a jackass as you and your papa, Verily I am prone to wonder if politics were made for men or jackasses, or to make jackasses of men.

"And that ain't all Bill, When you're dead that's supposed to be the end of you. But me? The parson tells me that when I die I gotta go to hell for ever. And most of what he says keeps me from getting any kick out of life.

"Tell me, Willy um, considering these things, how can you keep a straight face and look so dumb and solemn?"—American Journal of Veterinary Medicine.

Democracy vs. Dictatorship

Out of the welter of financial and economic difficulties and problems now troubling a confused world,—and which are directly or indirectly the outcome and aftermath of the Great War,—there has emerged one great question which now begins to overshadow all others, because all others are being up in it. That question may be summed up like this: Will Democracy survive? Are democratic forms of government incapable of successfully dealing with conditions as they now exist in most countries and in the world at large?

The Great War, we were told, was a war to end war; a war to save civilization; a war to protect democracy from autocracy. Nevertheless in actual results as we see them throughout the world today, there is now more talk of war than there was in the early months of 1914; there are more people who question whether civilization was saved, or can be saved; there is more of the autocratic in government than was the case during a half century before the war.

The question, therefore, that most naturally is disturbing the minds of all thoughtful people is: Whither are we drifting? What is to be the outcome of the present drift? Is it impossible under democratic forms of government to solve present problems, and, in order to solve them, it is necessary that new systems and forms of government be set up?

Four great nations are today under openly acknowledged dictatorships. Russia, Italy, Germany and Austria. Parliamentary institutions are either wholly abolished or suspended in all these countries. Under stress of existing financial and economic emergencies, greater powers have been granted to a Democratic President in the United States by a Congress under control of the Democratic party than were ever dreamed of a few years ago. In Canada certain emergency powers have been conferred upon a Conservative Government, while in Great Britain a union of members of all parties exists under the name of a National Government.

There is, however, this difference as between Russia, Germany, Italy, Austria, and the United States, Canada, Great Britain, that whereas in the first four named countries parliamentary government is, for the time being at least, abolished, in the latter named countries Parliaments still retain full control of the situation and can at any time withdraw the powers granted by them to their respective governments.

It would, however, be idle to deny that there is an under-current of opinion existing in the ranks of all political groups to a greater or less degree that present representative forms of government have not measured up as well as it was expected they would, should and could, to the needs of the time. As a result, intelligent men and women are asking whether the fault lies in the free democratic system itself, or whether it lies rather in the failure of those who for the time being are the leaders and representatives of the people under that system to adequately meet the responsibilities and discharged the duties imposed upon them.

One writer in a Western magazine discussing the rise of dictatorships in Europe, says: "Those who are out-and-out democrats, and who believe in parliamentary government, will regret this relapse, but it is evident that it is only under certain conditions that democracy is the wisest and safest form of rule. When people are controlled by passion or prejudice, or when they are ignorant or stupid followers of custom, they are unfit for self-government. When they are thoughtful and intelligent and have a high regard for justice and equity, they may be trusted to manage their own affairs." He concludes:

"The moral of all this for Canada is very obvious. She is worthy of parliamentary rule so long as wisely chosen parliaments intelligently exercise their powers, but when these are indolent or the cat's-paw of controlling interests, then there is bound to be agitation for reform."

In other words, the question is: Are the people themselves measuring up to their individual and collective responsibilities? The conclusion seems to be that it is not the democratic system of representative government that is at fault, but the use which the people themselves are making of that system in governing themselves.

At election times when as a people we are choosing our representatives in Parliament, and through them placing a Government in power over us, are we acting intelligently, or are we swayed by passion or prejudice, or blindly following a charted course without thinking for ourselves or giving heed to what we are doing?

It is never safe in life to make great decisions when we are not in a normal state of mind. It is as unwise to make such decisions when we are on the mountain-top of prosperity and laboring under an undue optimism; it is equally dangerous and unwise to make them when in the deep valleys of depression and controlled by a warped pessimism. The marking of our ballots should be directed, not by our emotions, but through the application of our thinking powers.

Dictatorships mean the loss of liberties now enjoyed, but if as a people we do not show our appreciation of those liberties by using them properly, then we are not deserving of them. Dictatorships are dangerous. If the nations of the world resort to dictatorships there is bound, sooner or later, to be a clash between this dictator and that dictator. Dictators must have their way, or they cease to be dictators, and when the desires of two or more of them come into conflict the people under their authority and control will suffer.

If we cherish our present democratic institutions of government, if we want to retain them, we must as a people prove ourselves worthy of them. We must think for ourselves and act intelligently. Otherwise some person will arise and assume to himself the autocratic power to think and act for us.

Too Bad He Didn't

John N. Cameron mathematician at the Northwestern State Teachers' College in Alva, Oklahoma, said that if Judas had established a trust fund of $1 at 4 per cent. interest, compounded semi-annually, the estate now would be valued at $10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000.

Who Owns The Honey?

A curious problem has been raised by the actions of certain bees at St. John's, New Brunswick. A beekeeper sold some honey to a neighbor who carried it to his home not very far away. There the vendor's bees discovered it and organized to recover the honey. This they did, but not before the purchaser had found out and made sure of the identity of the bees. Who owns that honey?

Weariness—Sleepless Nights Wrack the Nervous System

Men and women lose night after night on sleepless beds. Their eyes do not close in the refreshing repose that comes to those whose nerves are right. They are irritable and nervous, weak and worn out, and everything looks dark and gloomy.

Milburn's H. & N. Pills is the remedy that is required to restore them the blessing of good health. They bring back the sound refreshing sleep, tone up the nerves, and impart that sense of buoyancy to the spirits that is the result of renewed mental and physical vigor.

Hunting Stolen Railways

But Clews Are Indistinct Say Police Of Europe

Police of Europe are still hunting for two stolen railways, but declare that the clews are indistinct. One is a mountain railway in Central Europe, which had been closed during the World War and forgotten for some time later. When a party of officials and workmen prepared to put it in condition for reopening, all they could find was one cog. Later, thieves in Hungary took away everything connected with another line, temporarily out of commission, from rolling stock to rails and ties. No trace of it has been found.

A 266 lbs. MAN LOSES FAT

56 lbs. Off—Feels Better

A woman writes about her husband as follows:—"He started to take Kruschen Salts for rheumatism. His weight was then 266 lbs. He began to lose weight, and now he is 210 lbs. and feels better. He took half-a-teaspoonful of Kruschen in a cup of water every day, and he never kept asking him what he has done to fetch his weight down, and he always says 'Kruschen Salts.'" (Mrs.) E.S.

Thousands of overweight men and women find in Kruschen Salts a far better means of reducing than by taking drugs. The little daily dose of Kruschen Salts keeps the organs functioning properly every day and fills you with such a feeling of radiant vitality and vigor that before you know it you are fairly "jumping out of your skin" with energy instead of moping around—and reduction follows as a matter of course.

Unnecessary Noise

Annoyance Often Caused By Use Of Motor Horn

There is no reason why a comparatively mild bulb alarm should not suffice for any motor vehicle. Again there is a strong case for prohibiting the use of the horn during certain of the night hours. The horn is not one of the motorist's controls, nor is it an instrument of threat. It is a warning useful in its place and it should otherwise lie dormant.—Glasgow Herald.

Map Depicts All Canada

Moving Canvas Being Painted By Montreal Scene Artist

A moving panorama map of the Dominion of Canada, the largest of its kind in existence, is being painted by Gordon Hammon, well-known Montreal scenic artist, who created the gigantic map used in Canada's exhibit at the Century of Progress Fair at Chicago. The huge canvas is 100 feet long and ten feet high, and will move on a belt behind a stage equipped with an opening ten feet high by twenty feet wide. It will be exhibited throughout Canada and England.

Starting from the Atlantic Ocean, the scene takes in the whole of Canada, to Victoria and the Pacific, employing various colors for cities, towns, lakes and rivers. Government parks stand out distinctly, as do the mining areas, and the relative position of one place to another can be easily picked out. Even Canada's sports facilities have been included in this important undertaking.

Modern Project Planned

Air Line Across Sahara Desert Is Aim Of France

With only 24 hours from the heart of Europe to the heart of the Sahara, French experts are drawing plans for a Saharan Air Service instead of concentrating on the Trans-Saharan Railroad, which yet may take years to complete.

The success of several aviation and automobile missions to various points of the Sahara both from Morocco and Algiers, has convinced the French Government officials interested in Central African development that the liaison between metropolitan France and the African colonies can be accomplished easiest by air.

The Trans-Saharan Railroad Commission has made exhaustive studies of the probable and possible routes, but these plans still are in dispute because of the more recent and very accurate findings.

The advantages of automobile and aviation routes are apparent in that sudden tactical surprises, or heretofore unknown developments in climate, or geological aspects, may be overcome by a simple change of the route.

French civil aviation authorities still are working on plans for the Trans-Saharan Air Line. In fact, the 1934 budget contains an appropriation of ten million francs for Trans-African air routes, which would provide for an air route joining France and the desert with other contiguous lines over North Africa.

Several Canadian Farmers Likely To Join English Party

Exchange of visits by empire farmers, arranged each year since 1926 under the auspices of the British National Union, has continued to yield considerable practical benefits to those taking part and big preparations are now in hand for the tenth tour, which is to take place in January next.

On this occasion the party is to leave England for the Union of South Africa and Southern Rhodesia, and it is stated that among them will be several representatives from Canada. Major-General F. J. Duncan, the secretary of the British National Union, says inquiries have been received from Canada concerning the tour.

In Spite Of Handicaps

Many Old People In Canada Go To Church Regularly

From many parts of Canada have come little stories of men and women advanced in years, who, despite great handicaps, are attending church services regularly.

A case is reported from northern Alberta where a woman more than 70 walked three and a half miles to attend an Anglican church service some weeks ago. Down in Nova Scotia a United church elder nearly 90 years of age drove 35 miles with his wife on a recent Sunday morning to an anniversary service, making the trip by horse and carriage.

Add ½ cup zwieback crumbs. Spread on top of cake. Sprinkle with remaining zwieback crumbs. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 10 minutes.

New Gas Discovered

Fuel gas with a greater specific gravity than ordinary gas and condensable to such an extent that it can profitably be transported in steel bottles has been produced at the famous Leuna works at Halle, Germany. The gas, called propan, is a by-product in the distillation of benzene from coal. According to tests, one bottle is sufficient to supply an ordinary household for from one to three months.

Have Nations Forgotten

European Countries Seem To Be Preparing For Another War

The news that comes from Europe makes one wonder if that continent has already forgotten the bloody days of 1914-18.

France has just completed a "great wall" of fortifications extending back 15 miles from her German frontier which were five years in the building and which cost millions of dollars. Alarmed by Hitler's blood-and-thunder attitude, Belgium is undertaking immediate improvement of her eastern fortifications.

Equally distrustful of Hitler's intentions, Austria is seeking an addition to her army, bringing it up to its full authorized strength under the treaty of St. Germain. She may also reintroduce universal military training.

Hitler himself is talking and blustering in a manner that makes the ex-kaiser look like a novice in that art.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER
Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful commercial artist, and Peter Anson, struggling sculptor, meet in an art class and fall in love. She is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, but is not to share in their fortune when she comes of age. They are faced with the problem of "marriage or career" and Camilla does not want to let Peter down when he has so much promise as a sculptor. At an art school dance, Gus Matson, Peter's roommate, who is jealous of Peter's success, takes Camilla out on the lawn to tell her something she should know about Peter. Gus tells Camilla Peter is a cheat, that he only wants her money, and that he, Gus, loves her himself. At that moment Peter appears on the scene and knocks Gus flat. On the way home from the party Camilla tells Peter they are going to do something about their problem. She decides that they are to be married, and until Peter establishes himself, go on living their separate lives. Above Peter's protests she changes her point. Gus leaves Peter, and Peter and Camilla make plans for their marriage. They decide not to tell Mrs. Hoyt, who wants to see Camilla marry money. They are married quietly, and over their wedding dinner to each other, happily talk of the future and dislikes. Peter takes her home to his new studio and presents her with a piece of jewelry he has been working on secretly, as a wedding present. They decide that they are going to be wonderful parents despite the fact that they will be living apart.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XVIII.

Camilla lost no time in looking for a position. She might have taken her summer of leisure and happiness without a care, but that was not the Camilla. Already, she experienced a wave of panic when she thought of the possibility of being dependent upon Peter. Of course, she never would allow herself to do that, but she knew that the only way in which she could free him of that responsibility was to get a position and prove that she could take care of herself adequately. That had to be proved, too, before the day arrived when she would no longer be dependent upon the Hoyt resources.

She preferred to relinquish that dependence as soon as possible, now that she was secretly married to Peter. There was one point in her favor, that her career embraced one of the few kinds of business that were prospering in the midst of the depression. Advertising demanded the services of more commercial artists than any other one activity, and advertising was one of the few lines that profited when business was low.

The less business there was, the more desperately competitors advertised their products and contended for the favor of the buying public.

There was no reason for her to consult the help wanted columns in these days. No one needed to advertise for help and little was needed. A change in the personnel of any business was more likely to dispose of surplus help than to require more. Camilla submitted that her only chance was to submit working proofs of her originality, hoping that they would attract the optimistic eye of some advertising expert.

She worked out a set of water color plates in the modernistic vogue of angles, of which she was rather proud. There was also a group of juvenile subjects that she had sketched during hours of watching the children who came to play in the park, and of which diversion she never tired. These she arranged in a portfolio and set out, with a list of advertising agencies in her purse.

Already, she had been Peter's wife for a week, during which he had permitted her no time to consider occupation. They had talked for hours and walked in the park and shared frugal little dinners in small restaurants that proclaimed their courtesy of "Tables for Ladies." But neither of them minded this economical manner of getting acquainted.

Discovering all the little faults and virtues of each other, learning what subjects to avoid in their conversations that might irritate the other, every moment of these was exquisite joy. And the quality of food or the services of waiters was of infinitesimal consequence, as compared with smiling into each other's eyes across any table and sharing little intimate jests that interested no one in the world except themselves.

These things would go on forever, of course, but in this genesis of their life together, it was so sweet just to forget everything else and delight in its novelty. It was Camilla who insisted that they should both get to work in earnest, else there would be no happy future, of which they talked and dreamed so confidently. The summer term at National began, and Peter resumed his studies and work with new gravity, while Camilla began her quest for employment.

Their experiment, with marriage was just one of modern youth's desperate efforts to adjust itself to the complicated demands made by life and a rapidly changing world. In the process of innumerable experiences, it makes some startling and daring attempts to solve the increasing problems of marriage. But being brave and candid and loyal, most of them revert again to the same basic fundamentals upon which life began.

Reconciling the standards and ideals of the past with present economic problems is not a task which can be accomplished in a day, nor by one theory. It must be worked out slowly and painfully, as any problem is solved, at the expense of effort and human happiness.

Rebellious and defiant, youth takes matters into its own hands when conventions and economical crises become entangled, only to discover that the primeval forces of nature are stronger than all the other combined elements ranged against them, and they fall back into step again.

Young America—the real present pioneer Americans—fiercely loyal to its new nation, yet lingering wistfully in foreign traditions, presents one of the most crucial of these problems.

Their situation is not so different from that of the early pioneers of America, except in its outward aspects. The same ingenuity, fortitude, endurance and faith is required of them to conquer their new world. Just so, Camilla and Peter Anson faced a strange wilderness of danger and a life of conquest when they entered their marriage experiment, as did these new unions that set out in covered wagons across the prairies and mountains and deserts to conquer the west of young America.

When Camilla began to state her requests for work at the various agencies, advertising managers regarded her with varying attitudes of incredulous scorn, but those who deigned to look at her samples raised their eyebrows with mild interest and were a little more kind when she took her leave. However—they were very sorry—they could give her no encouragement. Their staffs were quite adequate in the present situation, also satisfactory, and a voluntary resignation was about as probable as a snowstorm in the Sahara.

In one office, a Mr. Bowman was a trifle more enthusiastic, but just as vague about any possibility of needing her services.

He seemed surprised at her industry in the face of existing conditions.

"You did all of all these without a definite use for them—just for samples? Most applicants think they are doing well to have one idea floating around idle."

"Oh, I have many other sketches and water color subjects, I develop every idea I have, even if it isn't very promising at first. One never knows what might be evolved from it in the process of working it out," she explained sedately. Folk invariably told her that she looked like a little girl, and Camilla feared that the agency managers would think so, too. So she searched her vocabulary for erudite phrases.

Mr. Bowman smiled with amusement. "You like to work, then?"

"Why, of course, I should think everyone would like to work—that is, if he can do the kind of work he enjoys. Drawing is my work and my pleasure, too."

"Well most people imagine they would like to work if they could get the work to do. When they get it, it's different. Perhaps it is I've everything we want when we get it."

"You mean that when we get things we have wanted, we lose interest in the possession. But work is different, isn't it? Getting it is only the beginning toward an end."

"Many people don't think so," her adviser mused. He seemed to be in a leisurely and conversational mood, for which Camilla was grateful. These little excursions into the business element and contacts with its administrators were a revelation to her, and valuable.

"You would be surprised how many people believe that if they just had a chance to do something important, they would meet the requirements. Yet they never would consider doing the work itself. It must be one of its meeting unknown requirements to do, so much easier to dream than to do, and more popular to have faith in self than to prove it. You interest me because you have worked dreams into reality and proved to yourself what you can do. The work is excellent."

"I am sorry that there is no possibility of my taking you on."

"I appreciate your compliments, Mr. Bowman. You give me encouragement."

"You need it—particularly now. But always remember this: no matter how clever you are or how industrious, there are always many others who are clever and industrious to compete with you. That explains why the dreamer can't get in at all. It is difficult enough for those who are capable and willing to work."

Camilla reflected that she might resent this man's coldly practical observations, except that she knew he was right and knew what he was talking about. She felt a little friendly toward him as he took her name and address and promised to let her know if he had anything she could do. All the managers whom she interviewed had done that, so it delineated nothing in particular. It was just as probable that she never would see him again.

Successful As Truck Farmer

Blind Man Supports Wife And Young Daughter

Undaunted by the fact that he is totally blind, William Easton, of Rochester supports a wife and six-year-old daughter. To do this, he has turned jack-of-all-trades.

Outstanding among his many efforts to keep the family ladder full is his role of truck farmer. Although hemmed in by the boundaries of his own small yard, Easton managed to raise enough vegetables this year to be the envy of the neighborhood. Unaided and entirely on his own initiative, he tilled the soil, laid out 20 rows of corn, planted tomato beds and finally brought to fruit a bumper crop of carrots, beets, squash and many other vegetables.

THAT DEPRESSED FEELING IS LARGELY LIVER

Wake up your Liver Bile

—Without Calomel

You are "feeling punk" simply because your liver is sluggish. It really has your bile bile used your bowels. Flaccid and flaccid are both sluggish, and your entire system is being poisoned.

Take Carter's Little Liver Pills. Simply because they are so gentle and so effective, they will only move the bowels—ignoring the real trouble.

Take Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. No calomel (mercury). No harm. Ask for them by name. Retail substitutes. See at all drugists.

Not New Phenomenon

Making Enemies Is Characteristic Of German Diplomacy

Noel Panter, British "correspondent at Munich who was put in prison for describing heavily armed Storm Troopers in a Hitler review, symbolizes not only the efforts to throttle the press in the Reich and foreign newspaper men as well, but the obstinate, almost cheerful, Hitlerite determination to make as many enemies as possible in the rest of the world.

This is not a new phenomenon. It has been characteristic of German diplomacy in many respects, for sixty years and has caused incalculable harm to the German nation. Hitler tells his people that they are "ringed about by foes" and proceeds to make more enemies for Germany at every turn with his idiotic persecution of the Jews, the tolerance, until lately, of attacks upon peaceful foreigners in Germany and now this persecution of a reporter who, in describing merely what he saw, has "injured" the Hitlerites by adding a few new facts to the growing accumulation that shows they really are turning Germany into an armed camp.—New York Evening Post.

Rock-Rings Like Bell

An oddity in East Greenwich, Rhode Island, is Drum Rock, a big boulder which may easily be rocked by hand, but which cannot be overturned. When thus moved it produced a deep, bell-like tone. Indians, according to tradition, used Drum Rock to call councils and spread alarms.

Said to have been worn by Charles II, a pair of doeklin gloves with fingers and gauntlets embroidered with silver thread, were sold in London recently for $35.

Little Helps For This Week

"Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God."—Philippians 4:6.

We tell Thee of our care, Of the sore burden pressing day by day, And in the light and pity of Thy face, The burden melts away.

We breathe our secret wish, The importunate longing which no man can see; We ask it humbly, or, more restful still, We leave it all to Thee.

—Susan Coolidge.

That prayer which does not succeed in moderating our wish, in changing the passionate desire into still submission, the anxious tumultuous expectation into silent surrender, is no true prayer and proves that we have not the spirit of true prayer. That life is most holy in which there is least of petition and desire, and most of waiting upon God; that in which petition most often passes into thanksgiving. Pray till prayer makes you forget your own wish, and leave it or merge it in Gods will. The Divine wisdom has given us prayer, not as a means whereby to obtain this world's good things, but as a means whereby we can escape evil, but as a means whereby we become strong to meet it.—F. W. Robertson.

Premier Was Thrifty

Late Sir Oliver Mowat Borrowed Clock When Parliament Met

In the new foyer of Massey Hall Toronto, there hangs a clock which formerly graced the dining-room in the famous old Queen's Hotel on Front Street. According to the historic lore of early Toronto this clock was loaned regularly to the Parliament of Sir Oliver Mowat when it met in the old Parliament Building on Front Street. This grand old man was too thrifty to purchase one for the House.

Odds & Ends

GETTIN' LICKED

Got a lickin' from my dad, Worst one I ever had, Claims I said words that were bad—

But I didn't!

Though in tears I did protest, Dad just shed his coat and vest, Said, "Young man, it's for the best!"

But it wasn't!

Cut a limb from off a tree, Toughest limb that he could see, Said 'twould hurt him more than me—

But it didn't!

Took me through the woodshed door, Where we'd often gone before, Laid it on till I was sore—

Think I wasn't?

With a face that looked quite grim, He did wield that saplin' limb, Till I wondered at his vim—

Think I didn't?

How I howled with all my might, Even when the blows were light, 'tought Ma'd make him quit from fright—

But she didn't!

When I left that gruesome shed, Eyes all tears—face all red, I remarked, "Wisht I was dead!"

But I wasn't!

But I guess that like as not, Every lickin' that I got, Somehow seemed to hit the spot—

Wisht it hadn't!

"What, joined the great majority?"

"Oh, no sir! She was a good enough woman as far as I know."

All World Shaken By Earthquake

Ottawa, Nov. 21—Dominion observatory officials agree today with London seismologists the centre of last night's earthquake, which set the whole world shaking, might have been centred in Northern Canada, around Baffin Bay.

The first tremors were recorded here at 6:27 p. m. E. S. T., yesterday. The distance to the epicentre was 1,840 miles. The time of the origin was 6:21 p. m., the record continuing for four hours.

The general direction of the centre of the quake was set at northeast from Ottawa and the distance and direction of the shock would set it somewhere in North Canada, possibly around Baffin Bay.

PRAIRIE SOIL SUPERIORITY

The essential or distinguished characteristic of the Western prairie soils is the possession of a large proportion of vegetable matter and its concomitant nitrogen. It is to this fact unquestionably, says the Dominion Chemist, that these soils primarily owe their remarkable fertility and lasting quality. For the most part, they certainly contain abundant stores of the mineral elements of plant food, but in this respect they do not differ from many soils of less productiveness in other parts of the Dominion. It is the larger percentage of nitrogen-holding humus-forming material and its intimate incorporation with the sand and clay that give to these soils their superiority, chemically, physically and biologically. Lastly, there is the winter with its intense cold practically locking up the stores of plant food from the autumn until the spring opens again. Waste from leaching, such as occurs in countries in which the winter is mild and open, is thus prevented.

ALBERTA'S OPPORTUNITY

in the British Bacon Market

For the first time in history the World's Greatest Bacon Market has granted a definite quota to Canadian Bacon Producers, under Controlled Imports to Assure a Steady Market. Canada's quota is 280,000,000 lbs. annually.

The Key to This Market is Quality

Alberta was second in 1932 among all provinces in total hog marketings, but only eight hogs in every 100 marketed were suitable for the British trade.

Not More Hogs, but Better Hogs

What is needed is not greater numbers, but a greater proportion of the Select Bacon Type required by the British Market.

Policies to Encourage Production of High Quality Bacon Hogs Suitable for Overseas, have been adopted by the Alberta Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Federal Government, Railways and Packers. These include board bonusing and exchange of off type sows by the farmers for selected gilts from the packing plants.

Write for particulars to

Alberta Department of Agriculture
GEO. HOADLEY, Minister of Agriculture. S. G. CARLYLE, Live Stock Commissioner.

Canada's Autumn Glory

They came in at a thousand-a-day clip all through October, the leaves that were giant in size or marvelous in beauty of coloring and shape, from all parts of Canada where the maple grows. The response was to the unique contest, inaugurated by the Canadian Pacific Railway with a view to encouraging interest in the Canadian autumn landscape. Prizes were offered for the largest maple leaf and for the most beautiful. The idea was an immediate success from the moment of its announcement. Everybody got out into the country after autumn-tinted leaves and the railway encouraged the search by operating Fall excursions. The leaves came in ever-increasing quantities to the offices of E. T. Nottle, director of exhibits, for the Canadian Pacific. The photograph shows the process of spraying and mounting the leaves.

Outstanding artists are acting as judges of the competition for the most beautiful maple leaf; they are: C. W. Simpson, R.C.A., R. W. Pilot, A.R.C.A., and James Crockett. J. M. R. Fairbairn, Chief Engineer, Canadian Pacific Railway, is judging the competition for the largest maple leaf.
